

I can write about the leadership qualities Vision Unlimited has helped me develop, speak about the people this organization has brought into my life, mention the many challenges I have faced, or even describe the mental toughness it brought but what good is it if you yourself are not inspired? What really needs to go through your mind when you are reading this is, "What passion is in your heart?" You can come to Vision Unlimited and try it out but if you have no vision then what's it for, if there no burning desire to be something greater, then why come? Or maybe you need Vision Unlimited to open doors in your life that you could not have discovered on your own.

That was me as I grew up in a Christian home but still had no desire to become anything greater in life. Everything was given to me; I never had to fight for anything, I never had to rise up, I was blessed to a fault. At Vision Unlimited you get called out, challenged, pushed, and driven till you think you can't go anymore. This forces you to dig deep and discover what you're made of, the moral truths that you will carry for the rest of your life. I am 20 years old now going to college for radiology and the values and morals that I have learned from Vision Unlimited are ingrained in my character driving me closer to my goal of helping other people in need. Let me challenge you to find your Vision!
